full Saturday downtown lately, consider this your official invitation to change that.

We talk a lot about "supporting local," but downtown is more than a list of businesses. It's a series of moments. It's that first real walk of the season along Lake Bluff Park, watching the buds start to show on the trees while the whitecaps roll in. It's the sound of the train coming through and the smell of fresh coffee drifting out onto the sidewalk.

Your perfect spring Saturday? It probably starts with a caffeine fix. Whether you're grabbing a specialty latte at Infusco, a pour-over at Forte, or one of Caffe Tosi's famous breakfast pastries, there's no wrong way to wake up here.

From there, it's time to wander. Spring is the season of the "new," and there is plenty to discover. Stop by Slackers Too, Edit Salon, or Out of the Ashes to explore some of our newest downtown spaces. You should also check out the new Elephant's Breath Antiques location at the north end of State Street and keep an eye out for spring sales popping up in shops all along the way.

Speaking of food, this is the last weekend to enjoy Savor the Shoreline. It's the end of our month-long celebration of the culinary talent we have in Southwest Michigan. Make sure you drop off your passports at the welcome center to be entered for a chance to win a two-night staycation at the Inn at Harbor Shores. From the classic comfort of Silver Beach Pizza to the elevated menus at Bistro on the Boulevard or RyeBelles, it's the best excuse you'll have all year to try that one dish you've been eyeing.

After lunch, take the long way down to the water to soak in the lake air. If you have the kids in tow, the afternoon practically scripts itself: the Silver Beach Carousel is spinning from 12:00 PM to 5:00 PM on weekends, and the Discovery Center is the perfect home base for a few hours of exploring. Whether you're heading to the Curious Kids' Museum for some hands-on fun or hitting the new Slackers Too on Broad Street for a round of arcade games, making these stops is a mandatory part of the downtown itinerary.

But honestly? My favorite way to spend a spring afternoon is just seeing who I run into. It's the casual "hello" to a neighbor outside one of our downtown wineries or ice cream shops or sharing a table at Silver Harbor Brewing or Tim's Too. That's the "local" part of St. Joe that you can't bottle up.

As we look ahead to May, the calendar is already filling up. Antiques on the Bluff returns on May 3, followed by the Memorial Day Parade on May 22, and the first St. Joe Farmers Market and lighthouse tours on May 23. Summer will be here before we know it!

But you don't have to wait for one of St. Joe Today's big events to find yourself here. The shops are open, the tables are set, and the lake is waiting (just don't jump in quite yet...)

We spend all winter talking about how lucky we are to live in a place people travel hundreds of miles to visit. This spring, I'm inviting you to be a tourist in your own town. Walk the bluff, try the new taco spot, grab a passport, and remind yourself why you love calling St. Joe home.

See you downtown.

The Homeowner's Guide to Whole Home Generators

Power outages have become more frequent and unpredictable, leaving many homeowners searching for reliable backup solutions. Whole home generators offer a seamless way to maintain electricity during storms, grid failures, or other disruptions. These systems automatically detect outages and supply power to essential circuits throughout the house, providing peace of mind without the hassle of extension cords or manual startup.

Whole home generators, also known as standby generators, differ significantly from portable models. While portable units require manual connection and fuel monitoring, standby generators install permanently outside the home and connect directly to the electrical panel. They run on natural gas, propane, or diesel and activate within seconds of a power loss. Most systems include an automatic transfer switch that safely isolates the home from the grid and shifts the load to generator power.

Selecting the right generator begins with calculating power needs. Homeowners should list critical appliances and systems, such as refrigerators, furnaces, well pumps, sump pumps, medical equipment, lighting, and security systems. A typical household might require between 10 and 22 kilowatts, though larger homes with multiple air conditioning units or electric heat can demand 30 kilowatts or more. Undersizing leads to frequent overloads, while oversizing increases unnecessary fuel consumption and upfront costs. Professional load calculations ensure accurate sizing.

Installation involves more than simply placing the unit. Generators require a concrete pad for stability, proper clearance from windows and doors for ventilation, and connection to the home's fuel supply. Natural gas models tie into existing utility lines, offering unlimited runtime as long as the supply remains intact. Propane tanks provide an alternative for areas without natural gas service but need periodic refilling. Diesel units deliver high power density but involve more maintenance and fuel storage considerations. Local building codes and utility regulations often dictate placement, electrical connections, and permitting requirements.

Maintenance plays a crucial role in long-term reliability. Manufacturers recommend exercising the generator weekly or monthly under load to keep internal components lubricated and batteries charged. Annual professional servicing includes oil and filter changes, spark plug inspection, coolant checks, and battery testing. Many modern units feature remote monitoring through smartphone apps, alerting owners to potential issues before they escalate. Neglecting routine care can reduce lifespan and increase the risk of failure during an actual outage.

Fuel management deserves careful attention. Natural gas eliminates storage worries but depends on pipeline integrity during widespread emergencies. Propane tanks should maintain adequate levels, especially before storm season. Homeowners in remote areas may benefit from dual-fuel configurations or larger underground tanks. Understanding consumption rates helps estimate runtime and plan accordingly.

Cost considerations extend beyond the purchase price. A complete whole home system, including installation and transfer switch, typically ranges from several thousand to tens of thousands of dollars depending on capacity and features. Factors influencing price include generator brand, kilowatt rating, enclosure type for noise reduction, and smart technology integration. While the initial investment appears substantial, many homeowners recoup value through avoided food spoilage, business continuity, and protection of sensitive electronics. Some insurance policies offer discounts for installed backup power.

Noise levels and aesthetics matter for residential settings. Modern generators incorporate sound-attenuating enclosures that reduce operation to conversational volumes at typical distances. Placement away from living areas and bedrooms minimizes disturbance. Weather-resistant housings protect against elements while blending with landscaping when possible.

Whole home generators represent a significant step toward energy independence. They eliminate the stress of sudden blackouts, preserve refrigerated medications and food, and allow families to continue normal routines. As climate patterns shift and grid demands grow, these systems provide a practical safeguard for essential modern living.

Homeowners considering a generator can consult BOSS Services or another licensed professional for site assessment, sizing, and installation. Proper planning ensures the system performs reliably when needed most, transforming potential disasters into minor inconveniences. With thoughtful selection and diligent upkeep, a whole home generator becomes a silent guardian of comfort and security.

Full of Crêpe Brings Sweet & Savory Creativity to St. Joseph

Glen & Shelly Head

Glen: We overheard a couple nearby raving about the uniqueness of Full of Crêpe in downtown St. Joseph. That's when it hit me—I had never actually had a crêpe before…not even on a trip to France, where the delicate dish originated. I always assumed they were just thin pancakes. Turns out, they're so much more—light, folded creations layered with sweet or savory fillings that offer a completely different experience.

Opened in June 2025 by husband-and-wife team Aaron and Amy Hake, Full of Crêpe brings a fresh, family-owned concept to downtown St. Joe. The space feels welcoming and relaxed, the kind of place where you can linger a bit over coffee and conversation. And with a name like that, you know there's a sense of humor behind the counter.

The menu features a thoughtful mix of six savory and five sweet crêpes, along with a full lineup of coffee drinks and cold beverages. Whether you're stopping in for a quick breakfast or a leisurely lunch, there's something here that feels both familiar and a little unexpected. (And keep an eye out—an expanded espresso bar is on the way.)

"I had spent a lot of time in the restaurant business," Aaron shared. "After experiencing a few creperies, including a favorite in Sault Ste. Marie, I thought it would be a fun concept to bring here. It's been a big hit—especially during the tourist season."

We started with the Sunrise crêpe—scrambled eggs, cheddar, spinach, and bacon (sausage optional). The crêpe itself carried a subtle sweetness balanced with light savory notes. Warm and neatly folded, it held everything together without the heaviness of a traditional breakfast sandwich. The melted cheese stretched with each bite, and the garlic dill aioli added a bright, flavorful finish that tied it all together. It's the kind of dish that feels both comforting and just a little elevated.

Aaron explained that traditional crêpes are often made with buckwheat flour, but they opted for a more approachable batter. "We experimented to find the right balance—something that delivers flavor but is still soft and pliable for folding in the ingredients."

Next came the Hunshine, a creation inspired by Amy—Aaron's "Hun," which is where the name comes from. The crêpe is packed with tender grilled chicken, cucumber, warm cream cheese, and everything bagel seasoning, making it a hearty, satisfying fan favorite. The contrast of the warm, creamy filling with the cool, crisp cucumber creates a balance of textures that keeps each bite interesting, while the seasoning brings everything together in a subtle but flavorful way. Shortly after it hit the menu, bacon was added as an optional add-on, giving the dish a nice smoky kick. The Hunshine can also be ordered sans chicken for a flavorful vegetarian version.

We wrapped things up with Berries n' Cream—a fitting finale. Fresh blueberries, raspberries, and blackberries were nestled in a warm cream filling, all tucked inside a lightly dusted crêpe. The tartness of the berries led the way, keeping the dish from becoming overly sweet and delivering a clean, refreshing finish that didn't feel heavy.

Make the trip to downtown St. Joe and experience Full of Crêpe—it's a fun, flavorful eatery that's anything but ordinary.

Shelly: Next time, I'm ordering the PB Nana with peanut butter, banana, honey, and chocolate chips. Yes, please.

the 'good works' front in Whirlpool's long-standing support of Habitat for Humanity.

At this year's Kitchen & Bath Industry Show (KBIS), one of the largest and most respected gatherings in the home design world, Whirlpool's family of brands brought home a series of high-profile awards—led by a standout win for KitchenAid.

The biggest recognition went to a new KitchenAid wall oven, which earned a top industry award for innovation and design.

In plain terms, that means the oven stood out not just for looks, but for how it performs in a real kitchen—think more precise cooking, smarter features, and easier usability for home cooks. These awards are judged by designers, builders, and industry pros, so they tend to reflect what's actually useful—not just flashy.

While awards shows can feel like "inside baseball," this one matters because it often previews what's coming to the retail floor over the next year or two.

For shoppers, the takeaway is simple:

- Better cooking performance — more consistent temperatures and results.
- Smarter features — technology that actually helps, not complicates.
- Design upgrades — appliances that fit modern kitchens visually and functionally.

It wasn't just KitchenAid. Other Whirlpool-owned brands—including JennAir, Maytag, and the flagship Whirlpool brand itself—also received recognition for product design and innovation.

That matters because each brand targets a different type of buyer:

- JennAir leans high-end, design-forward
- KitchenAid focuses on serious home cooks.
- Maytag emphasizes durability and everyday reliability.
- Whirlpool centers on practical, everyday performance for the broad consumer market.

For Southwest Michigan, where Whirlpool remains one of the region's largest employers, the awards offer a positive counterpoint to recent headlines about market pressures and stock performance.

At the end of the day, these recognitions signal that the company is still highly competitive—and winning—on product innovation, which is what ultimately drives long-term consumer success.

For Whirlpool, it's a reminder that even in a tough business climate, the products themselves are still earning top marks where it counts—inside the home.

For nearly three decades, the Benton Harbor-based appliance maker has worked alongside Habitat, not just writing checks, but helping outfit homes with the major kitchen essentials some families would otherwise struggle to afford.

Since the partnership began in 1999, Whirlpool has donated more than 260,000 appliances worldwide— from refrigerators and ranges to garbage disposals—ensuring families moving into Habitat homes can start fresh with reliable, energy-efficient equipment already in place.

That support matters in very real ways. For new homeowners, it can mean lower utility bills, fewer upfront expenses, and more room in the budget for groceries, childcare, or simply getting ahead.

In the U.S. and Canada, every new Habitat home includes Whirlpool appliances, making the company a behind-the-scenes part of virtually every key handoff moment when a family receives the keys.

Over time, the impact has added up:

• More than $160 million contributed to Habitat efforts.

• More than 1.1 million people reached globally.

• Support for home builds in roughly 50 countries.

But beyond the numbers, the partnership has also brought Whirlpool employees into the work itself. Volunteer build days and community projects have connected local teams directly with families, putting faces and stories to what might otherwise feel like a distant corporate initiative.

The effort has included Whirlpool's own backyard here In Benton Harbor. The Whirlpool Foundation has backed housing and neighborhood revitalization work, including support for the current Project T development, aimed at expanding opportunities for working families.

Habitat's broader mission—creating safe, stable, and affordable housing—has taken on added urgency in recent years as housing costs continue to climb nationwide. Through both direct support and advocacy, the partnership has also contributed to policy changes intended to make housing more accessible for millions of Americans.

As Habitat celebrates five decades of building homes and hope, Whirlpool's role remains a steady one: helping make sure that when the door opens for a family, what's waiting inside truly feels like home.

Meagan Olson,

Licensed Medical Aesthetician/Certified Laser Practitioner

April Is Rosacea Awareness Month: Understanding the Causes, Triggers, and Modern Treatments

As someone who has spent nearly two decades working in advanced medical aesthetics and laser medicine, rosacea is one of the most common skin conditions I see in the treatment room. Many patients come in frustrated by persistent redness, flushing, and skin sensitivity that seems impossible to control. The good news is that with the right approach, rosacea can be managed very successfully.

Rosacea is a chronic inflammatory skin condition that most often affects the central part of the face — the cheeks, nose, chin, and forehead. It typically appears as persistent redness, flushing, visible blood vessels, and sometimes acne-like bumps. In more advanced cases, the skin may become thicker or more textured over time.

While the exact cause of rosacea isn't fully understood, we do know it's driven by a combination of genetics, chronic inflammation, and overactive blood vessels in the skin. Individuals with rosacea tend to have highly reactive facial vascular systems, meaning their blood vessels dilate more easily—and remain dilated longer—leading to persistent redness and visible flushing.

One of the most important aspects of managing rosacea is identifying and avoiding personal triggers. While each individual may have slightly different sensitivities, there are several common patterns we see time and time again. Frequent triggers include sun exposure, heat, spicy foods, alcohol—especially red wine—stress, hot beverages, and extreme temperature changes. Even overly harsh or aggressive skincare products can disrupt the skin barrier and lead to flare-ups.

Because rosacea skin is already in an inflamed state, protecting and calming the skin barrier is critical.

One of the most effective treatments we use in medical aesthetics for rosacea redness is BroadBand Light (BBL™) Therapy. BBL™ is an advanced light-based treatment that targets the excess blood vessels responsible for redness and flushing.

The light energy is absorbed by the hemoglobin in the vessels, allowing them to safely collapse and be reabsorbed by the body. Over a series of treatments, we can significantly reduce background redness, visible capillaries, and chronic flushing. What patients often notice is that their skin tone becomes much more even, calm, and resilient.

Another benefit of BBL™ is that it improves overall skin quality while reducing inflammation. In my experience, patients often tell me their skin not only looks clearer, but feels healthier and less reactive.

Of course, professional treatments are only one piece of the puzzle. Daily skincare plays a huge role in managing rosacea long-term. I always recommend focusing on products that support the skin barrier rather than stripping it.

I've had excellent results with our Pavise Medical Skincare. Pavise with DiamondCore neutralizes rosacea, promotes skin repair, and significantly reduces redness and lesions, offering promising relief for rosacea patients through targeted antioxidant-rich treatment.

Rosacea is a chronic condition, but it is very manageable when we combine trigger awareness, supportive skincare, and the right in-office treatments. With today's technology and medical-grade skincare, patients who once struggled with constant redness now have real solutions that can dramatically improve both their skin and their confidence.

Healthy skin is not about perfection — it's about balance, and with rosacea, the goal is always calming and strengthening the skin so it can function the way it was meant to.

As someone who played volleyball in both middle and high school, I'm excited to share details on Michiana Volleyball. This community-driven platform is dedicated to connecting and celebrating the volleyball community across Southwest Michigan and Northern Indiana. Founded by Jim Ragosta Jr., the platform was created to shine a spotlight on the incredible athletes, coaches, and programs that make volleyball such a special part of our region.

Through storytelling, photography, videography, and social media coverage, Michiana Volleyball highlights the achievements and moments that define the sport while helping players, families, schools, and fans stay connected to the game. In addition to digital coverage, Michiana Volleyball also organizes events and experiences that bring the volleyball community together in person, creating opportunities for athletes to compete, learn, and grow.

As the platform continues to evolve, Michiana Volleyball is becoming a trusted regional resource for athletes and families seeking guidance on training, development, and the college recruiting process. A Solid Financial "Construction" Plan

Dear Dave,

My wife and I are in our mid-thirties, and the only debt we have is a combined $15,000 in student loans and credit card payments. We've got almost $100,000 in our 401(k) plans, plus we have no children. What steps can we take toward becoming even better investors?

Curt

Dear Curt,

Whether you're building a house or building wealth, a rock-solid foundation is an absolute must. Without a firm foundation, everything can easily fall apart. So, while you two aren't off to a bad start investing-wise, let's talk about the "construction" process a little.

The first brick you want to lay in your financial foundation is becoming debt-free. The second is to have an emergency fund of three to six months of expenses in the bank. This is money that you never touch, except in the case of an actual emergency. It doesn't go toward vacations, Christmas or anything else.

These two elements help form a firm foundation from which you can build wealth. Most people skip these steps, and jump right into funding 401(k)s, Roth IRAs and mutual funds. These are all great things, but the problem in doing it that way is you've started work on the house before you've laid the foundation. Believe me, this can cause all kinds of setbacks down the road.

Basically, we're talking about the first three Baby Steps in my plan. Baby Step 1 is to get your emergency fund started with $1,000 in the bank. Baby Step 2 is paying off all your debt, except for your home, using the debt snowball system. And Baby Step 3 is to finish building your emergency fund to the point where you have three to six months of expenses sitting there.

Curt, the debt you two have isn't a huge problem. But it is the symptom of you both buying a bunch of stuff you couldn't afford with money you didn't really have. Get on a written, monthly budget together, where you both agree on where every dollar is going before the month begins. I want you and your wife to break the debt cycle by having a permanent game plan.

Once you do that, you'll have freed up your largest investing and wealth-building tool—your income!

— Dave

Racking My Skull(cap) for Egypt Anecdotes

Astonishing as this may sound, I'm not sure I can provide many more cogent insights into the wonders of Egypt that I experienced on my recent tour there!

Partly it's because I can't keep all the temples and deities straight, and if I mix up my Anubis with my Hathor with my Isis, one of you will catch it, and no longer trust the truthiness of my columns! Even though I report plain and true facts at least once every six or seven columns.

I guess I could tell you about the Hanging Church in Cairo. It's a Coptic Christian edifice, dating from the 200s, and is the seat and official residence of the Coptic Christian pope. It's called the Hanging Church because it's suspended (architecturally speaking – don't ask me how) over two ancient Roman towers – ergo, it's "hanging." This unfortunately meant there were no anecdotes that some of my fellow tour-goers were keen to hear – no one was ever hanged in the Hanging Church.

I guess I could also tell you about the temple in Dendara, Egypt, which sports a relief sculpture of Cleopatra, notable because our guide said it's the only confirmed image of Cleopatra in all of Egypt, confirmable because her name's in the accompanying cartouches. As is her Instagram feed.

Being her only depiction, this unfortunately meant there were no images of her that some of my fellow tour-goers were keen to see – comparisons of the real Cleopatra with Elizabeth Taylor, the star of the epically expensive epic film flop from 1963.

I guess I could also tell you about the souvenir that wasn't. One day on a boat ride across the Nile, our tour group was joined by a couple of street vendors. One was selling these small, knitted, inexpensive skullcaps. (I searched google to learn what these things are called, and found out that they're known as "small, knitted, inexpensive skullcaps.")

Anyway, I ponied up $2 for one, while my wife bartered for one from the other vendor. I wore it on our river cruise ship the rest of the day and throughout the evening as well, which was entirely appropriate because that evening aboard ship we participated in a Galabeya party, wherein practically everyone wore one or more traditional Egyptian garments, a galabeya being one, most of which were acquired spur-of-the-moment from the onboard gift shop. My wife's spontaneous purchase was a translucent veil with a beaded border, which she wore artfully wrapped around her head. (Worth noting: I needed my small, knitted, inexpensive skullcap waaaaay more than my wife needed her translucent beaded veil – this is due to the fact that one of us has waaaaay better hair than the other.)

Anyway, when we got home, I modeled my skullcap for my kids and grandkids on facetime calls, and was ready to do the same on a video call with my wife's dad and siblings. But she said, "Take that OFF!" I asked why. And learned she HADN'T purchased a small, knitted, inexpensive skullcap back in Egypt! She'd decided to give the one I bought to her dad!

So "my" souvenir isn't.

I'll never mention this to my father-in-law. But, since he's quite the penny-pincher, I'll make him just a little uncomfortable about owning it; I'll tell him it's a small , knitted, EXPENSIVE skullcap!

Don't Miss the View

I love to be the driver on road trips because I get to see the scenery. As a passenger, it is easier to miss the tapestry on the other side of the windshield. The summer sun warms my arm on the window as it illuminates the beauty all around.

And as the driver, I can point out all the things that the rest of the passengers should notice. To pry eyes from being glued to the screen instead of the scenery, I declare, "Look, an eagle overhead." "Do you see that plane landing over there?" "Check out that mountain peak!" If we are not paying attention, we can miss something amazing.

If we don't pay attention to God's word, we miss out.

In it, he points out our need for a savior. Look at that cliff of mistakes. Check out how far it is to the bottom. See the steep sides that are impossible to scale on your own.

I tend to think I can climb myself out of a mess. But that is only an illusion. I tell myself, "I will do better next time…but here I am still stuck at the bottom." If I don't know how stuck I am, then how will I ever be able to get out?

But also look to the rescuer who came. Rejoice greatly, Daughter of Zion! Shout, Daughter of Jerusalem! Look! Your King is coming to you. (Zechariah 9:9)

See the one who came to you. He scaled down the cliff to where you were helplessly stuck at the bottom. He descended into the depths of your sin to bring you out. I would want a rope thrown down but he did more than that. He came down to lift me up.

Look at what he did for you when you see a cross. Notice the breathtaking beauty of God's desire to love you. He calls you to "Look!" not at your fall but at your rescue.

The amazing sights on a road trip are met with amazement. The wonderful saving work of Jesus is met with rejoicing. What amazing heights he brings me up to. That joy can be a sigh of relief that you don't have to climb your way to him, instead he came to you.

Don't miss the view because what you see will paint the way you perceive life. Look at your King coming to rescue you. Gaze at the sight and find joy.

Spend a few minutes looking at a cross and reflecting on what God did for you. What do you notice?

Prayer: Dear Jesus, open my eyes to the scene unfolding this coming week. You came just for me. Help me find the beauty in your sacrifice for me and bring me joy in your love. Amen.

Stevensville's Pachyderm Pedalers Named Club of the Year by League of Michigan Bicyclists

The Pachyderm Pedalers Cycling Club of Stevensville has been named Club of the Year (2025) by the League of Michigan Bicyclists, recognizing the club's leadership in expanding access to bicycling, promoting rider safety, and strengthening the cycling community in Southwest Michigan.

Greg Collins, President and Found of the Pachyderm Pedalers accepts the Club of the Year Award from Andy Rohrer, Executive Director of the League of Michigan Bicyclists.

The award was part of the League's 2026 Annual Awards, honoring those advancing bicycling through advocacy, education, and leadership. Recipients were recognized March 10 at the State Capitol in Lansing during the Bicycle & Trail Advocacy Day luncheon.

"We're incredibly honored to receive this recognition," said Greg Collins, President and Founder of the Pachyderm Pedalers. "Our club was built on the simplicity and joy of bicycling—promoting healthy lifestyles, building bridges between communities, and strengthening relationships."

A major milestone for the club came this past year when it became a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, enhancing its ability to expand programming, build partnerships, and advocate more effectively for bicycling safety and infrastructure.

The Pachyderm Pedalers continue to grow the local cycling community by organizing safe, inclusive group rides for cyclists of all skill levels. These rides emphasize predictable riding practices, road awareness, and supportive group dynamics, helping both new and experienced riders feel confident on the road.

Beyond weekly rides, the club has made a meaningful impact through philanthropy and partnerships. Each September, the Pachyderm Pedalers host the Beer:30 fundraising ride in collaboration with Watermark Brewing Company, benefiting Cycle-Re-Cycle in Benton Harbor. The event has raised nearly $40,000 to support the organization's mission of providing bicycles, repair education, and transportation access to youth and adults.

The club also advocates for improved bicycling infrastructure, supporting efforts to expand bike lanes, shared-use paths, and connected trail systems throughout Berrien County and Southwest Michigan.

The League of Michigan Bicyclists, a statewide nonprofit dedicated to improving life through bicycling, selects award recipients from nominations submitted by the cycling community.

"Across Michigan, people and organizations are doing the work to unify, advocate, and educate," said Andy Rohrer, Executive Director of the League. "These awardees represent the passion and commitment that make our roads safer, our trails stronger, and our cycling culture more welcoming."

By combining community rides, nonprofit leadership, advocacy, and fundraising, the Pachyderm Pedalers continue to demonstrate how grassroots organizations can make a lasting impact.

About the Pachyderm Pedalers

Founded in Southwest Michigan, the Pachyderm Pedalers Cycling Club brings cyclists together through organized rides, community events, and advocacy efforts that promote safe and accessible bicycling for all. The organization became a 501(c)(3) nonprofit in 2025. Learn more about the club online at pachydermpedalers.com.
